Player Development

Worked closely with many of the NBA's best

"Last season my pace got a lot better and that had to do with Coach Price. He's helped me a lot with changing speeds in the pick-and-roll. I'm able to see things a lot slower now – taking my time...He's been great with every aspect of the game."

– Kemba Walker | NBA Player | Charlotte Hornets

"...Mark Price, I felt like helped (Kemba) a ton...Jeff Van Gundy told me Mark Price was Steve Nash before Steve Nash. I feel like Mark has helped Kemba, not just with his skill development but just with being an NBA point guard, knowing what to look for, so yeah. And he watches film with him..."

– Steve Clifford | Head Coach | Charlotte Hornets

“He potentially has changed his future in this league with the work he did with Mark Price.”

– Steve Clifford on MKG’s jump shot

Oklahoma's Greatest Basketball Player

An article written in the Oklahoman in 2014 dubbed Mark Price the greatest basketball player that the state has ever produced.

“Mark Price is a literal Oklahoman and a figurative giant. The greatest basketball player our state has produced. Price is the only Oklahoma high school-bred player ever named first-team All-NBA.”

– Berry Tramel | Writer | The Oklahoman

In Their Words...

“Mark plays with a lot of desire and demands the best of himself.”

– Anonymous

“Mark is very level-headed. He has come to realize that if the head is out of control, the body doesn't know what to do. That's what being a playmaker is all about.”

– Anonymous

“He was a fierce competitor on the court. Off the court, he was a real man. He would stand up for what he believes, which is keeping God and family first. That's the sign of a real man.”

– Lenny Wilkens | Hall of Fame Coach

“Steve Clifford will probably not get Coach of the Year honors this season, but he's doing a hell of a job down in Charlotte with the Bobcats. So is his staff. There are a couple of future NBA coaches down there in Patrick Ewing and Mark Price.”

– David Aldridge | NBA

In His Own Words...

Mentors

“Working with Stan Van Gundy was a great experience. I feel like one of Stan’s strengths is preparation and defense and there is not a more prepared guy, night-in and night-out, than Stan Van Gundy. I learned a lot being a part of his staff.”

“Steve Clifford is a great communicator. I learned from Steve that communicating clearly with both the staff and the players is crucial to success. Everyone needs to understand their role.”

“I am grateful for the opportunities to have played for, learned from, and coached alongside many great coaches. I’ve tried to combine different things I’ve learned from each of them, while also incorporating my own personality to find what works best.”

Defensive Philosophy

“Every good team in the playoffs has the ability to score the ball. If you’re playing in the NBA, you’re a good offensive player. But the teams who pride themselves on executing defensively are the ones who win and advance in the postseason.”

“It begins with developing a culture of commitment on the defensive end of the floor.”

“The game is about spacing, pin-down screens, pick-and-rolls, post-ups, everybody has a different little take here or there, but it all comes down to defending the same kinds of things. It’s just about developing the scheme and getting your guys to buy into that commitment to defend.”

His Mission

“As a coach, I am passionate about passing on the knowledge that I have gained from my own experiences to the next generation of players. My mission is to coach winning basketball with a focus on excellence and integrity. I will mentor and develop young men to be successful on and off the court during and after their playing careers.”
